Barn Destroyed in T.Kewaskum Fire

A Washington County Sheriff's Deputy watches as members of the Kewaskum Fire Department extinguish the barn fire for a second time almost 12 hours later.

Kewaskum firefighters would have been a lot farther ahead camping out at the Robert and Linda Friedel home this weekend. Firefighters were called to the property three times over the weekend to put out a barn fire.

The first call came Saturday, when the Washington County Sheriff's Department was notified of a barn on fire at 703 Salisbury Lane in the Town of Kewaskum. Occupants of the home called 911 at 3:28 a.m. after observing flames coming from the barn. Kewaskum Fire and Rescue responded to fight the fire. They were assisted by the Boltonville, Kohlsville, Fillmore and West Bend Fire Departments.

The two story wooden barn had some hay stored in it but no livestock. Two cars parked near the barn were damaged by the heat and debris. There is no dollar estimate of damages, however the structure was a complete loss. No injuries were sustained as a result of the fire. The fire is believed to have been caused by a lightning strike to the barn approximately 45 minutes prior to

Town of Auburn Rezones Over 75 Acres

By ANDREW KUEHL
STATESMAN MANAGING EDITOR
akuehl@kewaskumstatesman.com

The Town Hall in Auburn was hot once again Monday night, but it wasn't just because of some overdue nice weather.

Residents once again expressed disapproval at a rezoning request made by their neighbor Francis "Bud" Discher. Discher was requesting to have 36.75 acres rezoned from EAG to RD. The land is located off CTH V.

Discher assured his neighbors that the land would not be sold for commercial purposes but exclusively for residential use and that he has received inquiries about his land from area developers who would be interested in it if it had residential zoning.

His neighbors touted they had no problem with selling the land or even possibly zoning it rural residential. Their complaint was with another neighbor who had left "a poor taste in their mouths" with the exact zoning that Discher was soliciting.

The difference between the two you would almost need a microscope to see but to the residents it was crucial. The only difference between the two was the ability to have horses or similar animals on the property and the owner of the property in such a district could petition the board to have a home-based business.

Another town resident stated "The problem is people move out here from the city and after they move here the farmer's shouldn't sell any more of their land."

The plan commission recommended to the town board to deny the application 3-2.

In another request the plan commission heard from Patti Hintz and Bill Hatch who requested to rezone 39.71 acres from EAG to RR. The property abutts New Fane and is known as the Egger farm.

The property would be

Rain Doesn't Phase Breakfast on the Farm

Members of the Washington County Dairy Promotion Committee scramble eggs for the attendees of the breakfast.

Hauling another load back to their vehicles. Attendees were treated to hayrides coming to and from the Breakfast on the Farm event.

Some of the hundreds from all over the world who dined on the Enright farm in Farmington.

By AMY SWANSON
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
aswanson@kewaskumstatesman.com

Not even Mother Nature could dampen the enthusiasm for this year's Breakfast on the Farm, held at Highland Dairy, LLC in Farmington. After days of what seemed like torrential rain, it was breakfast as usual for the 3,000 visitors to the Enright farm.

"I had a great time and I think it went really, really well," said Linda Enright. "It went as well as I had hoped. We had a little bit of a slow start, but it picked up and got really busy. Considering the weather, it couldn't have gotten any worse."

"It was satisfying to me to see how many people were enjoying the day," Enright said. "I think everything went well, without a hitch."

Visitors were bussed from several locations to the Enright's driveway and then a haywagon pulled by a tractor dropped people off at the farm.

Enright said many people took advantage of the barn tours, which were hosted by Enright's veterinarian and feed representative. Senator Mary Panzer and Rep. Glenn Grothman were also on hand to help with the Breakfast, along with 4-H groups from all around Washington County.

"It's a nice way to get to know people," Sen. Panzer said. "I grew up on a farm in Dodge County and it's a nice way to be able to talk to people and hear what's on their mind... Farms are very much a business operation."

Volunteers arrived at the Enright's at 4:30 a.m. and by 6:30 breakfast was ready. Scrambled eggs, pancakes, sausage, applesauce, milk and ice cream made for the perfect breakfast.

The cheese used in the scrambled eggs is a product of the milk from the Enright's cows. Enright said they used 80 pounds of Cascade cheese to feed this year's breakfast bunch.

Enright said people from all over the world, including Poland, Germany, Florida, New Mexico and Illinois signed the guestbook.

"It's really an education of a dairy farm...what the average day of a farmer is like," Enright said. "It shows people why farming is so important and it's needed."

Other activities included a peddle tractor pull, live music, animal exhibition, a sample shack, the Smoke House, Richfield Historical Society and tractor and machinery activities.

Enright said the Breakfast on the Farm Committee was very helpful and supportive. She said they would consider hosting it again if there was an opportunity.

Find Paradise at Boltonville Sesquicentennial Dump Run

With the Rocky theme, Eye of the Tiger in the background, Boltonville Fire Chief Joe Enright does some one-on-one training with Daryl Pree, also of the Boltonville Fire Department, for the Dump Run to be held in conjunction with the Boltonville Sesquicentennial celebration June 26-27. Enright's background in track and field makes Pree a SHOE IN to win the Dump Run.

By AMY SWANSON
aswanson@kewaskumstatesman.com

You'll find Paradise on the Dump Run/Walk in Boltonville, Saturday, June 26 at 9 a.m., starting at the Firehouse. Registration begins at 8 a.m.

"Before the dump was closed, out on Paradise Road, every Saturday, people would bring their garbage and non-toxic things to the dump," said Ann Enright, chair of the Boltonville Sesquicentennial Committee. "The men would go the dump on Saturday and stop at one of the three local pubs before they went home."

The Dump Run/Walk is just one of a variety of activities in celebration of Boltonville's Sesquicentennial, June 26 and 27.

"Families can introduce their children to the past," Enright said. "They can start the day by getting some exercise at the family Dump Run/Walk and then go to the pancake breakfast."

The Sesquicentennial celebration features a children's activity tent which will host "make and take" pioneer crafts such as butter making, corn shelling, weaving and wool spinning demonstrations. A Guess the Gadget game will challenge adults and children to identify a variety of gadgets.

"Horse drawn wagons will shuttle visitors around the village," Enright said, "so you can hear Abraham Lincoln speak, visit the Civil War Encampment, participate in the self-guided tour of historic homes and businesses."

Don't forget to stop by for refreshments such as beer and soda, brats and hamburgers, ice cream and fudge. Enjoy music from an old country band Saturday afternoon.

Watch the Bucket Brigade at 3 p.m. and stay for music from the Goodtime Dutchman on Saturday at 7 p.m.

Sunday's activities will begin at 10 a.m. with an Ecumenical prayer service attended by local and state dignitaries. A combined choir will be accompanied with an old pump organ.

At 11 a.m. a chicken and beef dinner will be served family-style followed by a Sheepshead tournament at 1:30 p.m.

Enright said descendants from many of Boltonville's founding families will be at the Sesquicentennial celebration. Look for families from the Bolton, Wescott, Wendel, Enright and Riley families. "This event will help bring the generations together to celebrate our heritage," Enright said.

the 911 call.

Kewaskum received another call exactly 12 hours later and again extinguished flames from the structure.

On Sunday, they again went out to put out flames. Assitant Fire Chief Mark Herriges stated that normally after a barn fire the structure is demolished after it is put out. With the homeowners being away the charred remains of the structure were able to restart multiple times.

Herriges also pointed out firewood was stored in the lower level of the barn which added to the difficulty of putting out the fire.

The Village of Kewaskum was hit hard by rain last week. Even prompting village officials to issue a water emergency urging citizens to cut back on water use. More photos can be found on page 24.

sold off in 2 1/4 to 5 acre lots. Hatch had hoped to market the parcel to those interested in building upscale homes.

After little discussion a motion was made by Joe Woodworth to recommend to the town board to rezone the parcel. Doug Schaut seconded the motion.

The town board gathered following that meeting and quickly motioned to accept Discher's rezoning request. The motion by Chairman Howard Laubenstein and seconded by Mike Nitsche passed with Merle Laatsch voting against the motion. The board then also motioned to approve the request of Patti Hintz. The motion by Nitsche and seconded by Laatsch passed unanimously.

The town board opened road construction bids and will make award the contracts at a meeting Monday, June 21 at 2 p.m. at the town hall. This newspaper will report those results next week.

COLORS: Clear, Green and Brown.

PREPARATION: Remove covers and rings and discard. RINSE CLEAN. This is the most important aspect of a successful recycling program. Bottles and jars that are contaminated with food residue cannot be recycled.

TIP: Many homeowners place their glass jars in the dishwasher along with their other cooking and eating utensils.

Place bottles and jars in your dark green recycling bin or blue recycling bag. Avoid breakage. Place the bin or bag at the curb on the same day that your solid waste is to be collected. Pick up will be Wednesdays for both solid waste and recyclables. Multi-family dwellings of six or more, remember, your recycling pick up will be the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.

Statesman Writer Heads to Spain

BY JUDY HARLOW
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
jharlow@kewaskumstatesman.com

My four-year-old grandson Brent was rather intrigued the other day with a globe his brother brought home from school.

An excellent time for a geography lesson, I thought, so I pointed out where Wisconsin is situated, along with the location of Florida, one of his favorite spots, and mine, too (because of Disney World).

Going one step further, we looked at New York City, which his Uncle Chad calls home, and then I showed him Spain, my destination and home for nine days, starting earlier this week. I am traveling with the my friend Midge and her daughter Carrie, who is the chaperone for the Hartford Union High students electing to experience Spain.

Between New York and Spain (on the globe), there certainly is a lot of blue, I quickly noticed, and blue, signifying the Atlantic Ocean, means the flight will definitely be the longest in my lifetime.

Let's see, I've flown to Orlando several times and to New York just about as many, to Boston, to San Francisco, to New Orleans, and Salt Lake City, along with Calgary for the 1980 Olympics. Oh yes, and there was the trip to Jamaica way back when our kids were younger and our wonderful former neighbor, Faye McClain, was willing to take care of them while we were away.

With very little concept of time and distance, other than how far it is from his home on Edgewood Road and say, McDonalds or Dairy Queen, Brent wanted to know if I would be coming home the same day as my departure.

"No, I won't be seeing you for over a week," I told him, and that's pretty long for our families to be apart, especially considering we have been taking care of Brent during the school year since he was a baby.

I certainly will have a lot to tell him and his older brother, Austin, about a country that offers beautiful architecture, bull fighting, gothic churches, outdoor cafes and vendors and a view of the Straits of Gibraltar, linking North Africa with the Iberian Peninsula.

This appears to be an excellent way to experience Spain, to go with a tour and have our own personal interpreter, Carrie, and her students to help us out of any language barrier jams we may encounter.

Madrid is our first Spanish destination, but first we must endure a quick jaunt to Cincinnati, and a stopover in the Big Apple before the seven hour, ocean view leg. (Oh please don't tell me we have to sustain life on a couple of Cokes and those airline peanuts.)

We will be staying in Madrid for three days and three nights, which should give us ample time to soak in the ambiance of Spain's capitol. I'm sure we will be glad to have a local guide for two of the days, so we won't have to waste a lot of time on finding places after getting lost.

If I haven't already mentioned it, my Spanish vocabulary is limited to counting from one to 15, and asking people how they are that day,

I don't imagine that will get me too far, so I plan staying close to the group.

There are many taxi cabs in the city, so we may venture out on our own the afternoon we have some free time. Hope the cabbies don't drive like they do in New York City ... it's like NASCAR without a flag man.

Ordering food without knowing the language should also be an experience ... pointing to the menu could be dangerous to my health, then again it might prove to be interesting. And if worse comes to worse, I'll just look down the street for the "Golden Arches." The coffee's always good, and maybe they have tacos ... or is it tapas.

The second day in Madrid, we plan to see the El Escorial and the Valley of the Fallen. A quick trip to the computer might help with a little background on both, as well as the Alcazar, which is one of the highlights of two days we will spend in Seville.

Already I have gotten a tip that Granada is a sensation, with the Alhambra and some beautiful gardens.

From Granada, we move south to Costa Del Sol, where we stay for our final two nights and have an option to go into Morocco for a day. A chance to see Africa is one I don't think I want to pass on, especially considering we would cross the Straits of Gibraltar to get there.

With an early wake-up call tomorrow, it's time to cut this column short, but I'm sure I'll have lots to write about when we arrive back in Kewaskum on June 24th.

KHS Foreign Exchange Students Represent South America and Europe

The Foreign Exchange students for the 2003-04 school year were Lucas Pinho, left, from Salvador, Brazil and Theresa Lorenz, right, from Germany.

By SHERI BALDIKOWSKI
STATESMAN FEATURES EDITOR
sbaldikowski@kewaskumstatesman.com

Lucas Pinho has been one of the two foreign exchange students for the 2003-04 school year at Kewaskum High School. Lucas is from the city of Salvador, state of Bahia, country of Brazil, South America.

Salvador is on the Northeast coast with many public beaches and the climate is hot all year. This lends to its heavy tourism trade. There is some fishing, but most of the industry in this city of three million is involved with cocoa or coffee. In fact, Lucas's grandfather has a small grove of trees that produce the cocoa beans. The state of Bahia is a large exporter of coffee and employs many people, since the type of coffee grown in this area is shipped all over the world, including the United States. The entire country produces coffee, but Bahia has the largest coffee export industry.

Lucas's father, Luiz, is a cardiologist, is director of cardiology at Das Clinicas Hospital, and has his own clinic. Lucas's mother, Marcia, is also a doctor and her specialty is internal medicine. She works at the same clinic with her husband. Lucas has one younger brother, Fernando, age eleven.

The city of Salvador is diversified in that it has many high-rise buildings, yet the downtown is still the same as it was when the Portuguese discovered it in the 1500's. They just keep fixing and painting these historical sites to preserve their heritage.

Many of the high buildings are condos or apartments which can house many people in a small area by building upward. A great deal of the people live in the city in these condos and apartments rather than in individual homes, which are found in the suburbs, as people want to be close to the city. This city-type living has a range from very simple to very elaborate, depending on your income. Likewise, the hotels in the city can be quite grand, or basic, and they are geared to tourists.

The people of Brazil all speak Portuguese, which has some similarities, but is totally different, than Spanish. In South America, Central America, and North America, per Lucas, Brazil is the only area that speaks Portuguese, which makes it unique.

Lucas attends high school in Salvador from 7:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and then afternoons are free for electives. Lucas knew the importance of knowing another language in securing an important job later, so he chose English. He took English school three afternoons per week for four and one-half years and can now speak English well.

Although Lucas is a senior at Kewaskum High School, he is only a junior in Salvador and has to still go one more year to high school when he returns. He attends a Catholic High School, as the private schools are better than the public schools in the early years. Although you can pay somewhere in the neighborhood of $2000 for a private high school in Salvador, the public colleges have no tuition fees. A student can even go on to become a lawyer or doctor without college charges. However, it is difficult to get into the colleges, as the standards are rigid. You are tested extensively in all categories and the exams must be passed in order to get into

German Exchange Student Ready to Head Home

Theresa Lorenz from Broeckel, Germany is the other Foreign Exchange Student at Kewaskum High School, which the Statesman ran a complete story on last July 31st. Theresa's host family was Doug and Brenda Strack and their four children of rural Kewaskum.

The Stracks raise "Haflinger" horses which is one of the reasons Theresa loved it there so much as she plans on using horses as part of a therapy program for a future career. Last August, she attended a horse show with the Stracks and rode "Dressage" (a formal type of riding) well enough to win a blue ribbon. She would like to come back in the future to visit the Stracks and perhaps ride in a contest again. Ironically, the Stracks will be hosting another Foreign Exchange Student from Germany for the 2004-05 school year.

When Theresa returns home she will be a Junior in Germany and will still have two years of High school to go before she can take the tough "Abitur" test which will enable her to get into college.

Theresa feels that being a foreign exchange student is a really good life experience, improves your speaking language, and helps you to grow a great deal as a person. When she leaves on June 29th, she goes with bitter-sweet memories as she feels the sadness that she may never again see the many friends she had made here, but, she looks forward to the happiness of seeing her friends and family back home.

college. Out of 1000 taking the test, approximately only 100 will make it. Good grades must also be attained in order to become a United States Foreign Exchange Student, including a good speaking version of the English language.

Lucas feels the lifestyles in the United States differ quite a bit from his home, especially dance wise. Lucas loves to dance and attend dances regularly back home with his friends. One of the things he loves about the United States is all the candy as he has a sweet tooth.

Lucas stayed with his host family, Chris and Sally

Cochran of West Bend, their three boys, age nineteen, fourteen and two, and their seventeen-year-old daughter. Lucas felt like they made him part of the family as they did things all together, like going to the movies or out for dinner. He became very close to his host family and got along very well with them all. He will miss them when he leaves on June twenty-first to return to Salvador. Lucas also appreciates all his fellow students at Kewaskum High School that were nice to him and he shall miss them also.

Plans for 10th Annual Social Fest Moving Ahead at Full Speed

By JUDY HARLOW
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
jharlow@kewaskumstatesman.com

Let the drums roll out. Let the trumpets call. While the people shout strike up the band!

An exciting event is coming later this summer ... the 10th annual Holy Trinity Social Fest is set for Saturday evening, Aug. 28th, and already the committee members are scheming on how they can make this year's event better than the last.

"To celebrate the 10th year, we are going to have a pig roast by Kewaskum Frozen Foods," Chris Fleischman, one of the regulars on the committee said recently, explaining the pig roast will kind of serve as hors d'oeuvres for the delicious chicken dinner that is the main part of the $25 per person ticket.

"Our chicken dinner is going to be catered by Woody's," Fleischman went on. "He (Todd Kleinhans) came in with a lot of good ideas and a good price for us."

No one has to miss out on inhaling the aroma of the chicken cooking, according to Fleischman, who said the Woody's cooking team will be grilling the chicken in River Hill Park, the site of the event from 4 p.m. to midnight. (The dinner will be served from 4 to 7 p.m.)

Tickets have been sent to all Holy Trinity parishioners, but Social Fest is open to all residents in the area, and anyone who has supported the event in the past knows what a good time it is.

Holy Trinity appreciates the support it has received on Social Fest in the past and is looking forward to seeing a lot of people from the community this year.

The $25 ticket includes the dinner, beer, wine coolers, soda and a chance at the $5,000 first prize in the raffle. There will also be five $500 prizes awarded and five $100 prizes, if 1,000 tickets are sold.

Those who purchase their tickets before June 30th are entered in an early-bird drawing for a $1,000 check.

New this year is an additional year tuition to the school donated by Albert and Joan Fleischman, in honor of their daughter Christa, who died in an automobile accident several years ago. Christa Fleischman attended Holy Trinity School.

Fleischman said there were 725 tickets sold for last year's Social Fest, and the committee is hoping to boost that number to near the maximum of 1,000.

"The more people there, the more who are bidding on things," Fleischman said, indicating Social Fest 2003 was definitely the best ever as far as the proceeds were concerned, proceeds that support Holy Trinity School and Church.

Tickets can be purchased at a variety of local businesses, including Holy Trinity School, Piggly Wiggly, Kirst Impressions and Herriges Oil.

This is the second year a silent auction will be part of Social Fest. It drew a great deal of interest last year, and it promises to be bigger and better this August.

Once again, the school children did classroom projects that were a big hit in the live auction a year ago. "We kept some of the ideas, and we did add some new things," Fleischman said.

Just as much fun, although at a smaller scale, are the $1 and $3 per ticket raffles. People purchasing $1 envelope

Southeast Wisconsin AirFest

Free Tickets Available to Families With Diabetic Children
Air Show Pilot with Diabetes Provides Motivational Program for Youth

West Bend -- Families with diabetic children are invited to attend the Southeast Wisconsin AirFest and a special educational program on diabetes free of charge on June 19, at the West Bend airport.

The two-hour program on Saturday morning is being hosted by Michael Hunter, of Wonder Lake, ILL., who is the only diabetic air show performer in the world and founder of Flight For Diabetes, a nonprofit organization that provides motivational and educational programs to children with the disease.

The program will offer insight into diabetes management and provide inspiration to conquer this often-overwhelming condition. The children and their families will then be able to enjoy other AirFest activities in the morning plus the airshow, which begins at 12:30 p.m. A special Flight for Diabetes invitation is required for free admission to the AirFest. It can be obtained by calling 815-728-0134.

Hunter flies in air shows across the Midwest to inspire diabetic youth to achieve their potential. His own dreams of becoming an Air Force pilot ended when he was diagnosed with diabetes in 1981 at age of 17 and was told he'd never fly again due to a world-wide ban on diabetic pilots. The FFA listed the ban in 1997 due to advances in diabetes control. Hunter got his license in 1999 and won his first aerobatic competition 14 months later. Then, after being told for 20 years that he would never fly, he made history as the first diabetic person to perform in air shows with a FFA low-altitude aerobatic license.

Over 16 million people in the U.S. have diabetes, which kills one person every three minutes and is the leading cause of blindness (age 20 to 75). The diagnosis rate for juvenile diabetes has increased 900% in the last decade. Remembering how limited he felt when he was diagnosed, Hunter says he wants to prevent other youngsters from feeling that way. "They need to see that diabetes can be controlled and does not have to keep them from achieving their dreams," he says.

Hunter, whose aerobatic performances at the AirFest is scheduled for 3:15 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, will experience G-forces of eight positive and up to three negative in his Laser 230 monoplane. The state-of-the-art equipment in his cockpit includes an Accu-Chek blood-glucose meter that is used regularly during flight to prevent an insulin reaction and a Disetronic insulin pump that automatically administers insulin to him every three minutes. These tools and his commitment to control his disease allow him to fly as safely as any other pilot.

A second Flight for Diabetes plan that will be on static display at the AirFest is a flight simulator that teaches children about aviation and raises funds for diabetic youth programs. For more information about Flight for Diabetes, visit www.flightfordiabetes.com or call 815-540-8774.

The AirFest, which runs Saturday and Sunday, June 19 and 20, will include a variety of other activities. Gates open at 8 a.m., when EEA Chapter 1158 will serve breakfast and rides will be available in five aircraft: the EEA's Spirit of St. Louis and Ford Tri-Motor, Clyde Zeller's Navy trainer, a Raven helicopter and a Cessna 172. Other historic planes on display include SC Johnson's Spirit of Carnuba, a replica of an amphibian flown to Brazil in 1935; a B-25 Mitchell Bomber and a Grumman avenger torpedo bomber similar to one flown by former president George Bush in World War II.

Activities starting at 9 a.m. include an antique and classic car show; a Model-T Ford display; a custom bike show; an arts and crafts fair; a flight simulator; laser tag and other games for teens; a kids' play area with giant inflatables; and free professional child-care.

Heritage Park in Plover takes a look into the past of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point to show how the university has advanced with the times.

Five displays created by students at UWSP showcase how women leaders in home economics, Fred Schmeckle, Schmeckle Reserve, the campus radio station and student demonstrations have made UWSP stand apart over the years.

The exhibit will be displayed inside the former Plover Methodist Church in Heritage Park, located between Washington Avenue and Willow Drive, beginning mid-June. Park hours are Saturdays and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. and admission is a $1 donation per person.

The exhibit "How UWSP Stands Apart: Samples of Change at a Central Wisconsin University" was created by 10 students in the Museum Methods class this spring. Under the supervision of Ed Marks, curator of education at UWSP's Museum of Natural History, the students researched and built the displays themselves.

To give each student background on the university, Justus Paul, dean of the College of Letters and Science, donated copies of "The World is Ours" to the class, said Marks. The book, written by Paul to celebrate UWSP's centennial, covers the history of the university from 1894 to 1994, so students were able to use it to find a subject that interested them. They also used the university's library and archives for research.

Alicia Schult, a senior from Wausau, was interested in what role women played in UWSP's history, so her group focused on the work of Bessie May Allen, who Schult called "the heart and soul of the home economics program." Schult, Melissa Theusch of Kewaskum, and Shawn Miller of Milwaukee are featuring photos and histories of Allen, Mary Secrest, Agnes Jones and other home economics leaders. The exhibit also includes renderings of how women's clothing changed from the 1890s through the 1970s.

For more information on UWSP's Museum of Natural History or the exhibit at Plover Heritage Park, contact Marks at 715-346-2858.

Students in the spring 2004 museum methods class included Melissa Theusch of Kewaskum, a senior majoring in environmental education and interpretation and elementary education. Missy is a 1998 graduate of Kewaskum High School. She worked on the home economics exhibit.

Ogi Selected to Attend National Student Leadership Conference

Kaitlyn Ogi

Kaitlyn Ogi, of Kewaskum, class of 2005, has been selected to participate in the National Student Leadership Conference (NSLC), an extraordinary leadership development program for outstanding high school students. While attending the NSLC, Kaitlyn will have the opportunity to study, experience, and develop the skills and traits that define and identify a leader. This year, approximately 8,000 gifted high school students from across the United States and from 45 countries around the world will find themselves immersed in a learning environment unlike any they have ever experienced. These young leaders return to their schools with increased potential and newly developed abilities that enable them to make a positive difference in their communities.

During the conference, students attend special workshops and classes where they study distinctions of leadership. Special guest speakers, that in previous years have included U.S. Surgeon General Richard H. Carmona, U.S. Secretary of Education Rod Paige, former U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, former Attorney General Janet Reno, President of the World Bank, James Wolfensohn and Supreme Court Justices Anthony Kennedy, Sandra Day O'Connor and David Souter as well as world-renowned surgeons, international medical researchers, Ambassadors, Pentagon and White House officials, add a sense of reality and bring current national and international issues to life.

Through participation in this extraordinary program, students develop their abilities to think on their feet, to engage in critical analysis, and to communicate effectively- skills that will serve them well as leaders in high school, college and throughout their lives. The NSLC mission is to identify and recognize outstanding young leaders from around the world, and to provide them with a unique learning environment that encourages not only academic achievement, but also diversity, cooperation and social responsibility.

"Students develop a sense of independence and responsibility," said Dr. Paul M. Lisnek, the NSLC Director of Academics and former Assistant Dean of Loyola University Chicago School of Law. "They leave with a true feeling of accomplishment and confidence in their ability to handle the challenges that lie ahead."

The NSLC offers leadership conferences on Mastering Leadership, Law and Advocacy, Medicine and Health Care, Entrepreneurship and Business, International Diplomacy, US Policy and Politics, Intelligence and National security and Inside the Arts.

Horbas Hands Out First Ever Principal Citizenship Awards

High school principals all over the state would probably agree one of the more difficult parts of their jobs is doling out punishments to students who refuse to follow policies.

What happens, on the other hand, to those students who always respect the school rules and try to be good citizens?

The way Christine Horbas sees it, those students should be in line for some kind of reward.

"We need to reward the positive," Horbas, who is completing her first year at Kewaskum High School, said, and she did just that with the new Principal's Citizenship Award she instituted this year.

The winners of the award, Sarah Stevenson and Scott Wilke, will have books for their freshman years in college paid for ... by Horbas.

"One of our goals in the school this year was to improve the culture and climate," Horbas said, so she personally mapped out a strategy that included a reward for students who are kind and respectful to others. They did not need 4.0 grade points or anything close to that, according to Horbas, who stressed, "The No. 1 criteria is to be a nice person."

The task of selecting these students was left up to the classroom teachers, who were contacted by e-mail about the Horbas award. She asked them for recommendations and received 25 nominations for boys and girls.

The parents of all those who received a nomination were sent letters of commendation from Horbas, and then there was the next step ... narrowing the list to just two, which was made a lot easier because each of the winners was nominated by five different teachers.

The night of the annual Honors Banquet, Stevenson and Wilke were announced as the winners. Both were pleased to have been selected, and both said being respectful and kind to others just comes naturally to them.

"When I'm nice, people are always nice back to me," Stevenson said, crediting her parents for showing her the best way to treat others.

Stevenson was very involved in student activities at KHS, including the Key Club, Student Council, National Honor Society, Spanish Club and HOPE (Help Our Planet Earth) Club.

And is it difficult to be respectful and nice to her peers and teachers? "No really, I find it pretty easy," Stevenson said.

When asked how he came to want to be a model student, Wilke said, "It's hard to say ... I've always been that way, I try to help my friends."

Wilke also expanded his philosophy as a result of being in the Peers for Peers group for three years. "It opened my eyes as to what other kids are going through," he said. "I was able to connect with them more on a personal level."

Wilke also spent a lot of time with the National Honor Society, Newspaper and Literature Club, forensics, Key Club and the high school musical.

Both new graduates said they were excited to hear their names called at the award banquet.

Stevenson, who also won the Wentdorf Memorial Scholarship at the West Bend Masonic Lodge, is planning to study business at UW-Oshkosh next year. And will the money for the books help out?

"Oh definitely," Stevenson said.

"It was a major honor to get it (Principal's Citizenship Award)," Wilke, who is enrolled at UW-Washington County where he plans to start out in the field psychology or business, said.

Wilke was also impressed with Horbas' generosity. "I thought it was great to see a principal care so much about the students," he said.

Similar responses were offered by members of the teaching staff, who were not originally told the winning students would be receiving money for their books.

"The most important thing we learn in life is how we treat others," Horbas said. "I'm just trying to put something out there to show it's good to be nice!"

Food for Thought

By Amy Swanson

School's Out! Now What?

I'm beginning to panic. School is out and our family's summer activities coordinator has really dropped the ball.

Posted to our calendar are about one dozen brochures for summer school, sports camps, music lessons and art classes. I'll need to take a day off of work to go through them all. I wonder if there is a limit on how many I can sign my kids up for.

Camps and classes are the saving grace of summer. By the end of June last summer, I was ready to send my two cherubs away to camp for the entire summer. If it weren't for tennis lessons, soccer and baseball, I think I may have put the boys in dance class!

I had enough of the constant chorus of, "I'm bored... There isn't anything to do... Everyone is gone... No one is home... I'm bored." I'm not one of these overboard-overschedule-their-kids kind of moms, but I do try to schedule at least one fun thing for my kids to do each day, even if it's just taking a walk together, but that too has its down side.

"I want to ride in the wagon with Madeline," says my 60 pound six-year old Ethan. "You are too heavy to ride in the wagon," I reply. In between sobs and screams he belts out, "Then I'm not going." By this time, my two-year-old daughter has managed to take the wagon completely apart. My nine-year old son, matter-of-factly says, "Let's just leave him here mom, I can't wait any longer." I think back to when I could strap them into the stroller, hand them a sippy cup and a bag of Cheerios without any debate.

"Kids should be bored," my mom usually offers up. "They need to be able to find something to do themselves," says grandma, a former teacher who is always armed with activities to keep them preoccupied. She can be down to one scrap piece of paper and a stick of lipstick and keep my kids busy for hours. I don't get it. I hope someday I too will have that magic power.

Summer vacation also throws off my meal schedule. I hope the food service director is planning on sending a sheet home with the summer lunch menu on it, or I will be completely lost. I'm not worried about my six-year old because he only eats bread and peanut butter...for every meal. Once and a while he will get a little crazy and eat a piece of cheese. He eats fruit, if it is peeled and cut correctly. Sandwiches have to have all the crusts cut off and be cut in triangles. The bread cannot be too firm, and not too squishy. He prefers bread from Grandma's house, of course.

My older son, who is used to corn puppies, spaghetti and chicken breast sandwiches will be in for quite a shock. I'm confident he will not be malnourished, but he will have to bend a little when it comes to the lunch menu. McDonald's everyday is not an option.

In my quest to make meal-time more exciting, I bought a cookbook designed just for kids, Cooking for Kids Collection by Southern Living. It is absolutely fantastic. This book goes beyond star-shaped sandwiches. Here are a few of my favorites:

Octo-Dogs and Shells

4 hot dogs
 1 1/2 cups uncooked small shell pasta
 1 1/2 cups frozen mixed vegetables
 1 cup prepared Alfredo sauce
 Cheese-flavored fish-shaped crackers.

Lay one hot dog on side with end facing you. Starting one inch from one end of the hot dog, slice hot dog vertical in half. Roll hot dog - turn and slice in half vertically again, making 4 segments connected at the top. Slice each segment in half vertically, creating a total of 8 legs. Repeat with remaining hot dogs.

Place hot dogs in medium saucepan; cover with water. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat. Remove from heat; set aside.

Prepare pasta according to package directions, stirring in vegetables during last 3 minutes of cooking time. Drain; return to pan. Stir in Alfredo sauce. Heat over low heat until heated through. Divide pasta mixture between four plates.

Drain "octo-dogs" Arrange an octo-dog on top of pasta mixture on each plate. Draw faces on each of octo-dogs with mustard. Sprinkle crackers over pasta mixture.

Pizza Snack Cups

1 can (12 ounces) refrigerated biscuits (10 biscuits)
 1/2 pound ground beef
 1 jar (14 ounces) spaghetti sauce
 1/2 cup shredded mozzarella cheese

Preheat oven to 375. In 12-cup muffin pan, evenly press each biscuit in bottom and up side of each cup; chill until ready to fill. In 10-inch skillet, brown ground beef over medium-high heat; drain. Sir in pizza sauce and heat through. Evenly spoon beef mixture into prepared muffin cups. Bake 15 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese and bake an additional 5 minutes or until cheese is melted and biscuits are golden. Let stand five minutes. Gently remove pizza cups from muffin pan and serve. Makes 10- pizza cups.

Cheesemaking predates recorded history, but we can thank the British for Cheddar. It is named for a village near Cheddar Gorge in Somersetshire, England. While the exact date of its development is not known, Cheddar has been made at least since the 17th century and is considered America's favorite cheese. Wisconsin is now King of Cheddar. If you counted Wisconsin's Cheddar population alone, the state would rank eighth in the world cheese production.

Whiskey Sour

By: J.A. Konrath

Put the word "crime" in a search engine on-line, and you come up with over 23 million websites on the subject. Criminals. Crime prevention. Solving crime. There's even a magazine devoted entirely to crime. I mention this to illustrate that people are fascinated by crime - murders in particular. There seems to be a human need to know what happened when violence occurs. However, it's obviously quite a different story when the bad guy is after you. In "Whiskey Sour" by J.A. Konrath (c.2004, Hyperion), the murderer is out there. Will the police get there in time?

Lieutenant Jacqueline "Jack" Daniels is 40-something and smart, a snappy dresser with a quick mind, and well-respected on the job. Jack is also tired, plagued by insomnia and annoyed by idiots on the force. And her personal life? Well, Jack has no personal life. Her live-in boyfriend just left her for his trainer. Her favorite hang-out is a pool hall where beer is cheap and dinginess reigns. And Jack remembers all too well that she was married once, until marriage took a back seat to the job. Jack begins to realize that she needs male companionship, and not the kind she gets from her over-eating partner, Herb Benedict.

Now something else has happened, and it's more important than getting a lunch date. A woman has been found dead, stuffed into a garbage can near downtown Chicago. She's naked, stabbed, and the killer has left a lacquered cookie and a note calling himself The Gingerbread Man.

The killer is smart - or at least thinks he is. He's carefully covered his tracks. He's chosen the girls he wants to kill. He's got a camera and tapes, so he can re-live everything he does. He has a detailed plan, and part of that plan includes Jack. But who is The Gingerbread Man, and why is he on a killing spree? Like most crimes, it takes a big break to solve this case. A big break and the brawn of a slovenly ex-partner who has a favor to return.

I have to admit that I didn't like this book at first. Lieutenant Jack Daniels is not like any other fictional cop in any other novel you've ever read. She's not cutesy or girly or scatterbrained, and she doesn't have a funny neighbor to help her solve the madcap crime. Once I got to know her as a character, however, I liked her a lot. I thought The Gingerbread Man was perfectly creepy, but that the crimes he committed were unnecessarily gruesome and perhaps described in a bit too much detail for a novel. Herb Benedict, surprisingly, was my favorite character in this book, and I'm hoping author J.A. Konrath brings him back in the next Jack Daniels mystery.

Grab a glass of something cold and settle in. "Whiskey Sour" is an exciting book, with a teasing sort of style that draws you in, and then lets you go for another round.

Rain, Rain Go Away. Come Again... Let us Dry Out!

Department of Public Works leadman, Alan Kuehl removes debris from the dam in River Hill Park early Saturday morning. At this point water was just about over the dam, later in the afternoon it was.

A view on Friday afternoon of the Milwaukee River from Main Street looking south into River Hill Park. To the left, machinery from the Riverview Drive road project can be seen under water. It is unknown how long the project was delayed because of the flooding.

Kewaskum Wastewater Management crews were forced to sandbag and pump water out of the pump-house located in River Hill Park. Former DPW director Augie Bilgo stated Saturday morning the last time flooding of this magnitude occurred was in the spring of 1989 when the ice melted. It is unknown the last time River Hill Park flooded due to extreme rainfall. Bilgo shared a collection of photos from that time period with this newspaper. Due to space constraints they could not be published this week but we hope to bring them to you in the next edition. Anyone with older flood pictures or memories are asked to contact Andrew at 262-626-3312.

The Kewaskum Museum also sustained flood damage but according to Village Administrator Dan Schmidt nothing was destroyed. Schmidt indicated that about 8-10" of water flooded the basement of the log house and museum. The DPW piled sandbags in the interiors to stop further flooding.

Trial and Error on Little Bay de Noc

Mark alters with a walleye he caught on Little Bay du Noc.

Hello Friends,

For the last five winters, the group of guys that I camp and ice fish with on Lake Michigan's Little Bay de Noc have said we have to try the open water fishing.

Each winter we generally do well catching monster walleye and northern pike while living on the ice in our permanent shacks and we also have a lot of fun.

This past week, my brother Mike and I took my 14-foot boat, the Kingfisher, up to Gladstone, Mich. for an exploratory trip on the big pond called Lake Michigan.

These guys were just arriving for a four-day trip and Nault had been up to the area two weeks earlier. He limited out easily most days and told us what to use and where to fish.

Mike and I launched my boat at Kipling after receiving more information at Bayshore Resort. My concerns about having a 14-foot boat, that along with its motor was manufactured back in the 1960s, on a big piece of water like Lake Michigan were unfounded.

We took a one-mile journey to the red buoy in 27 feet of water and began a drift along with about 30 other boats. Our bait of choice was a night crawler harness for Mike and a hair fly for me.

Other than catching a small perch, we just enjoyed the scenery, until Nault and Neely pulled up with four keepers and told us to switch to floating jigs and a small piece of crawler.

It didn't take long for a good to fish hit my jig and I landed a 20-inch walleye. We had met the challenge, made the journey, and caught a fish.

I lost another nice fish and caught four small ones. Mike caught a 16-incher, and then a storm pushed us off the lake about an hour before dark.

Sunday, June 6
High 76, Low 50

It was looking to be a promising day as Mike and I trolled out of the harbor today.

Within 30 seconds of Mike's Husky Jerk hitting the water, his pole was bending over and I had the net in my hand. Though Mike's fish was only a 26-inch northern, it was a pretty quick way to end the bet of who would catch the first fish of the day.

Unfortunately, soon after we got on the water, a strong south wind picked up and forced just about everyone fishing near us to hit the landing.

We were back on the water at about 6 p.m., and the wind had let up enough to fish. Unfortunately, what we were after was not very hungry, as it seemed everyone around us was finding out too.

My latest investment is a couple of planer boards. Planer boards are attached to your line and make your lure go off to the side of the boat, increasing your range more and more as you let more line out.

To be perfectly honest, I was completely in the dark as to how planer boards worked, but I knew they did work if you used them and the fish were biting.

Unfortunately, we didn't catch any fish with them. Actually, we caught hardly any fish tonight. We fished for about two hours after dark and had a couple of interesting experiences.

The first came as we watched a boat several hundred yards away traveling a high rate of speed heading directly toward a reef. Because it was dark, there was no way to warn the driver. The sound of steel on rock is not a good sound. We later caught up with the guys who created some serious problems for their brand new 225-horse Yamaha.

Shortly after their crash, the Walters and Walters act began their show. For some unknown reason, my motor was very thirsty tonight and used all of the gas in its tank before we made it back to the landing.

Mikey and I had to paddle back to shore and we were mighty happy we hadn't fished the north end of the bay four miles away.

Monday, June 7
High 84, Low 54

Very few people are catching fish, so Mike and I decided to go on a long distance mission trolling to the north bay.

Unfortunately, after we arrived, the south wind picked up and created an early and dangerous departure back to the landing. This was a recon mission. I will return every year until I have it perfected!

Happy trails!

Gosa, UW Crew Team Competes in NCAA Finals

Colleen Gosa

Gosa, in the middle, and one of the crew teams she competed with.

BY JUDY HARLOW
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
jharlow@kewaskumstatesman.com

They row, row, row their boats, but unlike the famous nursery rhyme, there's nothing gentle about the synchronized way members of University of Wisconsin crew team pull their oars to navigate down the stream until they are physically exhausted at the end of every race.

Colleen Gosa, who went out for the more traditional sports (cross country, basketball and track) when she was a student at Kewaskum High School, is among this year's Badger rowers. She knows the thrills associated with victories, the agony of the defeats, and will be able to say she knows the experience of participating in an NCAA Division 1 Championship event.

That's right. The Wisconsin team earned an at-large bid to qualify for the NCAA's that took place Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 21-23, in the competition held just outside of Sacramento, California.

Gosa, a junior, recalls how she heard about the crew team from some of its members during her freshman orientation week in Madison.

"My dad had told me about it, too," she said last weekend before leaving for California. Once she made a decision to go out for the sport, she was quickly steered to the fall practices to outline the basics for the rookie members.

"We practice in an indoor tank," Gosa said, explaining about 16 people fit in the indoor boat, and, "The water moves, but you don't move."

There was terminology and technique to be learned, and pretty much the coaches instruct the athletes to "make sure you never do this or that."

During her first fall on the team, there were three races, all distance races, according to Gosa, who explained they are held on rivers, using an interval format. What this means is the first boat is sent out, then a specific amount of time passes, and the second boat goes out, on down the line.

"You have to try to catch up to the next one and pass them," Gosa said about the 6-kilometer fall races.

Spring competitions are quite different in that they are shorter, 2 km in length, and there will be as many as six or eight boats in one race.

"It's like a 100-meter dash ... you all line up and go at the same time," Gosa said, reporting they start from a dead stop at a dock or "parking spot," with an official watching the stern deck of the boat, which, in crew, is the back of the boat because the rowers' backs are facing in the direction they are heading, which is the opposite terminology from regular boats.

Gosa has gotten to do quite a bit of traveling while being on the crew team. There are approximately 100 women's crew teams in the United States, with the sport being popular in the east, in Virginia and in the Big Ten, which has nine schools who sponsor crew programs.

The Big Ten is also very competitive in crew, according to Gosa, who said Michigan was the class of the conference this spring, winning the Big Ten title for the second year in a row.

"This year we got second, which is the highest we've ever finished," Gosa said, reporting the Big Ten competition was held just outside of Iowa City, Iowa several weeks ago.

Then, over the weekend of May 14-16, teams gathered in Oak Ridge, Tenn. for the Central Sprints regional qualifying, and again the Badgers wound up second, this time behind Ohio State, which had been the third-place team in the Big Ten meet.

The champion regional teams — finishes from the two eight-person boats and the two, four-person boats are figured in the final scores — automatically qualified for the NCAA finals, and then there were several extra teams, including UW, taken.

"The next teams are usually picked. Our regional was pretty competitive," Gosa, who is a biochemistry major, said.

There were 12 teams in Sacramento, and the final scores in this competition included finishes from a team's two, eight-person, one four-person boat and a pair boat.

"I (was) in the pairs," Gosa said, explaining there are coxswains along to call out the orders on stroking, only in the eights and the fours.

"The varsity eight is the first eight (boat)," Gosa said. "That's the priority boat, but they all count."

Obviously, the more people there are in a boat, the faster is goes. An eight can finish a 2 km course in seven minutes, according to Gosa, who said, the fours will have clockings of around seven minutes and 40 seconds, and, "In the pairs, it will take us somewhere around there."

Of course, wind and water conditions can have an effect on the times.

And do the rowers feel drained after each event? "That's for sure," Gosa said, indicating her winter workouts, which include work on stationary rowing machines and weight lifting, have helped her improve.

Gosa's partner in the race is Megan Silbrandt of Antigo, a good friend of hers. They had been in a four-boat for the Big Tens and regionals and finished third in both.

And what do the rowers think about during the competition? "You think a lot about stroking all together" so everybody puts their blade in the wake at the same time. They also think about trying "to gain a seat," which means watching the woman in the board opposite to them and trying to pull ahead of her.

UW has not had that much experience in the NCAA's. The last time the Badgers qualified was 1999, and that year, one, eight-boat placed 10th. Crew became an NCAA-recognized sport in 1997, according to Gosa, who said before that, there were national competitions and the Badgers won national titles in 1975 and 1986.

Athletics Post Shutout, Then Lose to Rubicon

BY JUDY HARLOW
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
jharlow@kewaskumstatesman.com

After getting rained out on Saturday, the Kewaskum Athletics were happy to see action in two games on Sunday, even if the second contest at Rubicon didn't come out quite the way they wanted it to.

The A's started off with Jim Ziegler's one-hit, 2-0 victory over host Hartford, then the players jumped in their cars and headed for Rubicon where they were defeated 5-3 despite a solid pitching performance by Bob Ogi.

Ziegler had the Hartford batters pretty well handcuffed in Game 1. The only hit he gave up was a single by Steve Owen in the top of the seventh inning.

There were zeros across the board for both teams until the top of the seventh when Josh Parrent's single drove in Ty Scholl. Parrent delivered again for the Kewaskum team in the top of the ninth. His sacrifice fly enabled Adam Sarauer to race home with the team's second run, and that was enough for the A's to pick up their third Rock River victory of the season.

Ziegler struck out five and walked just one hitter in picking up the victory.

There was just one extra base hit in the contest, a double by player/manager Jason Strobel which came in the top of the first.

Kewaskum threatened right away in the first inning of Game 2, loading the bases with no outs against Rubicon. Sarauer hit into a double play, scoring a run, but the A's could only muster one more run the rest of the way.

In the eighth, Schill reached on a base hit and moved to second when Strobel got hit by a pitch. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch, then Ketter hit into a fielder's choice, while Schill raced home.

"We only had two hits (off Breuer)," Strobel said Sunday night, reporting Schill stroked a single, and Steve Ketter drilled a double.

"Bob Ogi pitched eight innings. He pitched really well," Strobel said, reporting Ogi struck out 10 opponents.

With the split, the As are 3-3 in Rock River action and 5-5 overall.

Kewaskum was scheduled to play at Horicon on Wednesday evening. This Saturday, the A's will play host to Waupun in a 1:30 p.m. outing.

KHS Track Season Comes to a Close

Nick Bartley, shown during the WIAA sectional at Kewaskum, was one of the KHS record-breakers this spring. He set a new time of 2:01.61 in the 800m.

By JUDY HARLOW
STATESMAN CORRESPONDENT
jharlow@kewaskumstatesman.com

With great memories from the weekend at the state meet and the entire season fresh in their minds, members of the Kewaskum High track teams gathered last week with their parents and coaches to celebrate their accomplishments.

Special awards and letters were given out, following a delicious pot luck supper.

Co-coach Jerry Gosa took the opportunity to offer some words of wisdom on how lessons learned in athletics carry over to life, and he also included some words of warning that more work must be done if those who compete in this sport want to surpass the times and distances they posted this year.

"There are no guarantees," Gosa said, recalling how one relay team went to state when the majority of them were sophomores and juniors, and they said they would return the next year but never made it out of the regionals.

He congratulated all the participants for being "risk-takers," pointing out there are a lot of people in life who do not take risks, and as a result, rarely reach their goals.

Gosa also noted how members of both teams wanted to do better and better as the season progressed.

"As we do better, our expectations rise," he said, adding this type of attitude not only helps in sports but in life as well. He said in athletics, people learn to push themselves when they are tired and then push some more, and he urged the students to "please make sure to take things (lessons) into your life and use them daily."

The overall MVP for the boys team was Eric Nass, who set a new record of 42-3.5 in his first year of triple jumping and also qualified for the state meet with the 4x400-meter relay team which placed eighth overall in Division 2.

Gosa split the girls MVP honors among Amanda Donath, Amanda Magnus and Rachel Dums. All three participated in more than one event at state.

Magnus qualified for four events, finishing 11th in the long jump and sixth in the 4x400 relay, along with Donath, Dums and Sam Droese.

Donath had the team's top place at state, a fourth in the 400. In the preliminaries, she set a school record of 59.49. Her goal this year had been to break the minute mark and she did that several times.

After having problems with her steps in the state competition, Dums had to settle for ninth place in the 300 hurdles.

The Leadership Awards went to senior sprinter Josh Uelmen and Amanda Donath. The Most Improved Awards went to Luke Herriges and Amanda Magnus; the Outstanding Freshman Award to Bob Gibson and Ashley Turner; the Most Improved to Danielle DeGroot and Zach Holm; and the Most Dedicated to Amanda Donath and Garrett Donath.

The special awards were all voted on by team members with input from the coaches.
