KEWASKUM- The Public Library is sporting a fresh new look as it begins to reflect the image that libraries are not just about paperbacks and hardcovers anymore. A $75,000 remodeling is now complete and allows the library a chance to make better use of their existing space.

Library Director Steev Baker reported success in the seven-week project that started in May and ended about two weeks ago. The project was funded by three sources, mostly by a donation by the late Wayland Tessar. The rest of the funding, approximately $20,000, came from money received annually from Washington County that must be matched by the village in order to be spent. Baker says the library has about $100,000 built up from the county over the years

Baker says the goal was to make a better use of existing space. While square footage was not added, linear feet of shelving was increased by creating different spaces. Baker's office was moved and cut in half. The children's section was modernized and the reference section was cut in half.

'When we pulled reference, we made space for better seating for people to use our wireless internet, better placed (electrical) outlets," Baker explained.

A change in the way people now get their reference information allowed for the reference section to be decreased. Many things like encyclopedias and maps are now found online and can be accessed by using one of the four high-speed internet ready computers at the library.

Much of what was the library's reference section now holds the influx of new media items the library handles such as DVD and VHS videos. Recently the library has added a limited selection of Nintendo Wii games as well. Video games, at the library?

"We did a survey last year, and patrons thought we should have them, they wanted the games," Baker stated. He explained many of the games they have are interactive games that tell stories just like DVDs.

When Baker came to Kewaskum in 2000, the library had just started in audiobooks and videos. Now the library's catalog reflects hundreds of audiobooks (now on cd), videos (now dvds), music (cds) and wireless internet and computer use. He voiced his opinion in saying small town libraries like Kewaskum are now used as a cultural center for entertainment.

"The bulk of our collection is entertainment, I don't think that's bad," Baker added.

Next on his list Baker says he and library staff will continue fine tuning their collection. Ridding the shelves of many old materials and embracing new materials is a daily task and challenge. He says relocating things in the library so the collections fit together better will also be something he works on.

E-books and Kindle are expected to come into play in the near future as people switch from holding a paperback or hardcover book in their hands to reading on their laptop computers and smartphones. High speed internet will allow people the ability to download these books and audio books right to their computers, mp3 players or smartphones. Baker says the library currently has a limited selection of e-books but expects that to grow as technology improves.

A new library system that allows Kewaskum Library patrons to view and check out items in the collection of 45 libraries in the state has allowed patrons to find basically anything they need and have it in their hands within a day or two. This allows the library the ability to fill the needs of customers seeking older items that are not widely used in Kewaskum and keep the shelves fresh.

$150,000, but Gilles worries that something else may go wrong on an 80-year-old tower.

Designing and building a new tower is an 18- to 24-month project. The village has a site for it in Kettle Country Estates but the tower alone could run $875,000, not including digging the well, "so we're looking at a significant amount of money, Gilles said.

If the village discontinues use of the tower, it could use its other tower until a second one is built. Then, however, one water main break cuts off water to the entire village.

"It's a risk factor. You have no backup," Gilles said.

But the village receives $46,455 year from antennas on the tower. Gilles recommends leaving the tower up - even if it's not in use - to collect the money or until a new tower is built and the antennas can be moved.

Pride in country, alma mater Sadownikow donates flag pole drinking before KHS

A Yugoslavian immigrant who once played football for Kewaskum High School has given his alma mater's athletic complex named for his former coach a new and improved patriotic touch.

Kons Sadownikow, owner of American Design and Build Inc. of West Bend and selfdescribed patriot, recently donated a new flag and flagpole to the Doc Mitchell Athletic Complex.

Sadownikow said he got the idea after he went to a football game last year and saw the condition of the old flagpole.

"It was old," said Jason Piittmann, Kewaskum Athletic Director.

Sadownikow contacted Jim Palmer, the school district's director of building and grounds, and got working on the project. The new pole went up in spring.

Sadownikow graduated in 1961 from Kewaskum. He played for Ernie "Doc" Mitchell and Walter Bade, and still has chips in his elbow from the old, hard field.

"It honors the flag a little more," Sadownikow said of the pole. "Besides that, I played for Doc and to have a flag flying over his field is kinda neat.

"It dresses up the facility a little more," said Piittmann, who also coaches the school's football team that has rarely lost a home game the past sev-eral years. Piittmann puts the flag up and down and said the new pole runs smoother. The flagpole is from Flyrite Corp. in Germantown.

Piittmann said the district is grateful for Sadownikow's pride in America and his alma mater.

"We're grateful to alumni like him," he said.

Sadownikow emigrated in 1951 from what is now known as Serbia.

Graduate accused of Commencement

By Andrew Kuehl andrew@kewaskumstatesman.com

KEWASKUM-A Kewaskum High School graduate is accused of drinking prior to commencement on Saturday, June 13.

Jessica Schultz, 18, of West Bend, is reported to have been under the influence of alcohol prior to the ceremony. The Kewaskum Police Liaison officer investigated the case and found the teen with a blood alcohol count (BAC) of .043.

Schultz stated she was drinking the night before around midnight, with her mother. Her mother backed the story up therefore she could not be cited for under-age alcohol consumption.

The officer suspected Schultz was drinking closer to commencement as he could smell it on her breath and he thought the alcohol would have left her system from the evening before.

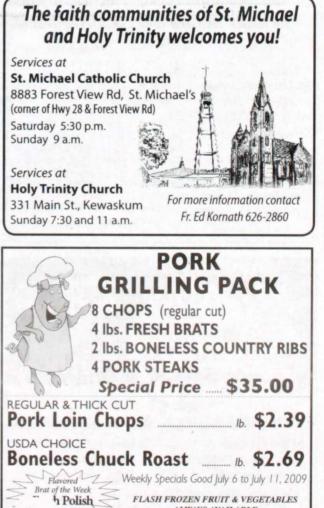

Kewaskum High School Principal Christine Horbas allowed the teen to participate because her BAC was under .05

Students and staff at the high school stated Horbas recanted on an earlier statement where Horbas told students that they would not be allowed to participate with any traces of alcohol found in their system.

One student stated they were told Horbas would be checking each student individually and if any trace of alcohol was found or she had reason to believe a student was high on any drugs they would not be able to participate.

Samaritan to show off remodeling at open house

Samaritan Health The Center of West Bend will unveil its new look at an open house on July 16.

The $8.6 million remodeling project that started July 21, 2008, should be completed by the end of the month, said Ed Somers, administrator of the facility.

The improvement is so drastic you can't recognize the old facility.

"When you're inside, no," Somers said.

The Samaritan will have 119 private nursing home rooms and six semi-private rooms

"All of them have private bathrooms now," Somers said

The facility is going from 228 to 131 beds, but adding a 31-unit community based residential facility (assisted living) called the Fields of Washington County, Somers said. All beds are now electric, he said.

The new look is much more homey than the old one. "It had concrete block walls. It had a cold, unwelcome feeling to it," Somers said.

And now?

The walls were plastered over to look smoother and more residential.

"It is a tremendous psychological lift," Somers said. "It really helps."

Washington County issued $8.6 million of bonds for the project, which the Samaritan will pay back over 20 years

"We receive no county levy," Somers said.

Plunkett Raysich Architects of Milwaukee did the design work, and Construction Management Group of New Berlin served as construction manager for the project. The open house runs from 2-6 p.m. on Thursday, July 16. Guided and self-guided tours will be available on three of the five floors. Light refreshments will be available.

'I'm extremely excited. I'm remodeled out. The residents have been really good sports," Somers said.

Caldwell began his work with EDWC in May 2006 as the first Executive Director.

A search committee has began working on a replacement. Until a new Executive Director is found, Anthony Warren, a member of the Board of Directors will assume the role of Interim Executive Director.

Interfaith Caregivers, Red Cross merge transport program

WEST BEND- American Red Cross (ARC) Washington County and Interfaith Caregivers of Washington County have agreed to incorporate the organizations' transportation programs into one.

Currently both agencies rely on volunteers to provide seniors and the disabled with transportation to doctors' appointments. The ARC program, uses agency owned vehicles to take seniors to medical appointments outside Washington County, while Interfaith volunteers use their personal vehicles for in-county and out-of-county appointments. The programs will be operated by Interfaith Caregivers and all volunteers will continue to provide these essential servic-

Interfaith Caregivers of Washington County is a nonprofit organization that connects older adults with "caring volunteers who want to lend a hand." About 20% of the total hours worked by Interfaith volunteers is involved transporting seniors to doctor appointments or grocery stores.

Interfaith volunteers also assist with light housekeeping, minor home repair, occasional visits, yard maintenance and snow shoveling. There is no fee attached to any of the services, but donations to Interfaith are always welcome and appreciated.

Interfaith volunteers decide which dates and times they can volunteer, how many hours they would like to volunteer, what services they are willing to perform and which senior or seniors they would like to help. Volunteers say they get just as much, or even more, out of their Interfaith volunteering as the senior. Rewards are measured in friendship, advice, cookies and many other gifts.

If you are interested in volunteering or for more information, please contact Interfaith Caregivers of Washington County at (262) 365-0902.

Farmington's Tennies takes Hatland - Reseburg center stage at Country USA

OSHKOSH- It was a different type of audience for Farmington vocalist Christa Tennies, as she performed on stage at this year's Country USA on Saturday, June 27. Tennies was the winner of local radio station WBWI/92.5 FM, Captain Morgan Karaoke contest for the spot on stage at Country USA.

Winning the opportunity to sing on the same stage as artists Diamond Rio, Julianne Hough, Rodney Atkins and Dierks Bentley was a dream come true for Tennies. Her big stage debut saw her performing Trisha Yearwood's hit, The Song Remembers When.

It's a far cry from singing at the Unitarian Church in Mequon, where Tennies is known to belt out a tune while she dusts the pews and altar. She owns her own professional cleaning service and her customers also take in her favorite tunes as she works.

Friends and family have been following Tennies as she sang at various Karaoke contests around West Bend, Hartford and even the Beechwood Firemen's Picnic.

"Christa has a beautiful voice," says Fuzz Martin, morning DJ and program director at WBWI.

Tennies is also working on recording her first demo CD with hopes of being Wiscon-

"Most people hear me sing and they think I'm from down south because of my southern sounding vocals". "My country sounding voice is actually natural and something I've had since I was a small girl." I'll never forget when my fourth grade classmate at St. Peter's Church School in Slinger asked me, 'Why do you always sing with a country twang?' I replied that, I don't do it on purpose, it just comes out that way!"

Today, Tennies enjoys singing in front of an audience, but admits she was pretty nervous when she was chosen to perform the national anthem at the Metro Dome for her Slinger High School baseball playoff game.

"It is a lifelong dream of mine to express myself vocally. I have been singing since I was a little girl and have always loved the way it makes me feel. County USA was a wonderful opportunity for me. My family and friends have been extremely supportive in my dream and they were there to share the moment with me."

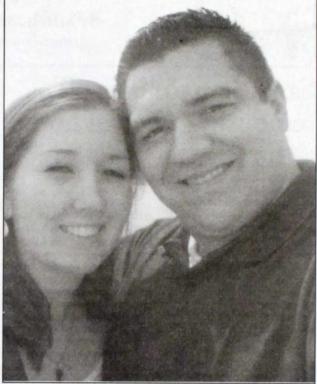

Living in the town of Farmington in Washington County, Christa is a freelance vocalist performing at weddings and funerals, and has studied at the Wisconsin Conservatory of Music in Milwaukee, performing at the Helen Bader Recital Hall.

"It was an unforgettable experience and it only makes me want it more. This was the push I needed to move ahead with my performing career. My family, was so proud, and that is such an amazing feeling."

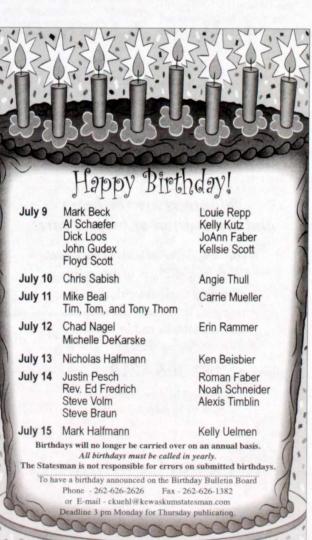

Love, Your Family

Dean and Janet Hatland of West Bend and Harlow and Judy Reseburg of Random Lake, are happy and proud to announce the engagement of their children, Jennie Hatland and Luke Reseburg.

Jennie and Luke are both 2006 graduates of Living Word Lutheran High School in Jackson. Currently Jennie and Luke are attending Concordia University in Mequon. Jennie's major is radiology and Luke's major is secondary Christian education.

No immediate wedding plans have been made.

Campbellsport Community Theater presents 'Into the Woods'

Campbellsport Community Theater will be performing Stephen Sondheim's musical "Into The Woods". An ambivalent Cinderella? A bloodthirsty Little Red Ridinghood? A Prince Charming with a roving eye? A Witch... who raps?

They are among the cockeyed characters in James Lupine's and Stephen Sondheim's fractured fairy tale. When a baker and his wife find that they have been cursed with childlessness by the Witch next door they embark on a quest to find the special objects to break the spellswindling, lying and stealing from Cinderella, Little Red Ridinghood, Rapunzel, and Jack (the one who climbed the Beanstalk). Everyone's wish is granted at the end of Act I, but the consequences of their actions return to haunt them later, with disastrous results.

What begins as an irreverent fantasy becomes a lesson about community responsibility and the stories we tell our children. This is one of Sondheim's most popular works. It is a timeless piece, a rare modern classic.

A very talented cast of singers and actors has been assembled from Campbellsport, Kewaskum, Lomira and Fond du Lac.

The subject matter of Act II may not be suitable for children under 10 years of age. It is coming to the Lang Auditorium August 6th, 7th & 8th at 7:30pm and August 9th at 1:00pm. Tickets are $8 in advance for adults ($9 at the door), $4 for children and a special senior citizen rate on Sunday for $5. They are available at Ben Franklin/ True Value, Twohig Furniture, & Sheila's Beauty Salon in Campbellsport or from any cast member. Reserved seats are being offered again.

Race to Wir

St. Lucas Lutheran School held their annual all school spring musical on Friday, May 8, in Hoenecke Hall. The title of their production was Race to Win. It was set at a NASCAR track and was about more than just winning a car race. To get the day started the Johnson Racing Team brought their race cars to St. Lucas School. Each student was able to sit inside the cars and have their picture taken. They also received autographed photos of both drivers. St. Lucas would like to thank the drivers, Shane Wiedmeyer and Brian Johnson, who took time out of their busy day to give the students this unique experience of learning more about racing and to get a closer look at their cars and Jeanne Goeden for helping coordinate this opportunity for the students. Serving the community since 1953

Throughout your life, you've probably noticed that there are two kinds of people: those that are late, and those that are not.

The late ones stroll casually in to a lunch, party, meeting, or appointment twenty minutes after they're supposed to be there, surprised to see you waiting. The on-time people are punctual to a fault, maybe even a little early.

Some people will be late to their own funerals. The rest would rather die than dally.

But if Detective Jacqueline Daniels is late, the dead body won't be hers. In the new audiobook "Cherry Bomb" by J.A. Konrath, a little procrastination on Jack's part may instead mean the demise of the people she loves.

As funerals go, this one wouldn't have been unusual had it not been for the phone call that Lieutenant Jacqueline "Jack" Daniels received, graveside.

The call was from Alexandra Kork – the original reason for the funeral – and she wasn't phoning with condolences. Alex had killed one of Jack's loved ones, and she had more murder on her mind.

Hours later, a photo of a bloody, duct-taped, tortured man was sent to Jack via a cell phone that Alex had furnished. The man had a wild look in his eyes, burns on his chest, and a rigged shotgun pointed at his head. And Jack had twelve hours to find the identity of the man and save his life.

But it didn't end there.

Another man, and two hours... this one, personal. And very gruesome.

And another, with just a minute's warning - this one, almost killing one of the people closest and most important to Lieutenant Jack Daniels.

But with the help of former partner (and possible halfbrother) Harry McGlade, bank robber and part-time hustler Phin Trout, a Crimebago (mobile crime lab + Winnebago), and a few friendly fellow Chicago Police Department officers, Jack Daniels won't let Alex Kork get away with murder.

Even if it kills her.

First, let me say this: if you haven't read or listened to author J.A. Konrath's previous novels, stop right here and go get them, particularly the last one, "Fuzzy Navel". Reading that book will make the experience of hearing this one so much better. You probably could listen to "Cherry Bomb" by itself, but going back one book will be more than worth your while. Now, for fans of Konrath:

be prepared. Be prepared for Alex Kork-on-steriods. Alex is about a hundred percent nastier, which means her crimes are crueler and squirmier. Prepare yourself for several heart-in-your-throat moments of knowing what will happen but never being sure. Be ready for at least three big sock-in-the-eye surprises and a double-twist ending that will make you cheer – and howl.

Get ready for sadness, laughter, gasps, and desperately wanting the next book.

Vacation warning: "Cherry Bomb" is definitely, absolutely not appropriate listening for kids under the age of seventeen nor is it an audiobook for the weak of heart. But if you're a Konrath fan or if you love detective novels, "Cherry Bomb" is explosive.

Skeleton is the latest excitement in KHS grad, Bausch's life

By Mitch Maersch For the Statesman

She had gone skydiving and bungee jumping before. That morning she helped as a brakeman for a bobsledder "which basically felt like a minute-long car wreck that left me feeling nauseous." Trying the sport of skeleton, said Kewaskum's 2003 co-valedictorian Lauri Bausch, wasn't exactly appealing. "So the idea of jumping

"So the idea of jumping on a sled head first and personally being responsible for steering my way down, pretty much gave me a panic attack." But it was too late. Her name was announced, the green light turned on and the start clock was counting down.

"I seriously felt like I was about to blackout," she said. With her history of thrill activities, she figured she could handle skeleton just once. Little did she know. "So I got on, and once I was in the first turn I surprisingly relaxed and loved it. Funny thing is, my helmet was way too big, so five out of the six trial runs I took that day I couldn't see a thing and just let my body do whatever felt natural," she said. "I'll never know if I would have panicked had I seen the course the very first time I went down."

That was last fall at the Olympic Training Center in Lake Placid, N.Y. Bausch was an intern.

After love at first run, Bausch still wasn't sure if she wanted to pursue a competitive career in the sport.

Several weeks later, she returned to Lake Placid for the Eastern Club Races. She wound up fifth amongst the women who raced and achieved good run times for her level of experience.

Bausch is now in Texas training for the US Bobsled & Skeleton Federation combined test later this year. The 24-year-old hopes to make the World Cup team in 2010-11 and earn a spot in the 2014 Olympics.

For Bausch's personality and character, skeleton is almost a paradox.

"The sport requires that you go from an intense start, to lying relaxed throughout the rest of the course. I'm a highstress person so I thought I wouldn't be able to do that. Anyone that knows me well knows I'm not good at making myself relax and have difficulty focusing," she said.

"But whenever I got on the sled, I immediately relaxed and was able to focus." Skeleton has made her focus for much longer than several seconds at a time.

"In a strange way I also see my participation in the sport as a way to develop character because of the discipline and hard work and so many other things that go into it. I've kind of been a drifter the past six years, somehow succeeding even though I often didn't have my efforts focused or di-rected," she said. "So the idea of really committing myself to something that I'm incredibly drawn to, regardless of the outcome, is enough to leave me feeling it was an opportunity worth seizing. So even though I love the rigor of physically preparing for the sport, the emotional/mental elements may be even more enticing to Submitted photo

Sports have always been a big part of Bausch's life. In middle school, she played basketball, volleyball and was on the track team. In high school, it was tennis and soccer. She played softball her entire life in summer leagues, and in college she played and coached rugby and participated in other sports leagues.

Last December, she graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire with a degree in kinesiology with a focus on human performance/ sport performance.

"I took a 'nontraditional' route for my college education," she said. "I spent a semester at Southern Cross University in Lismore, Australia, then managed a branch of my sister's powersports business in upper Michigan and coached youth rugby in Port Elizabeth, South Africa between my semesters at UW-EC."

Bausch is a certified strength and conditioning specialist through the National Strength and Conditioning Association and writes her own strength/power training programs.

Now near Houston, Bausch works as a sport performance coach in between training. A typical day is atypical.

"Most days at work, I start out leading a few speed-agility-conditioning camps in the morning, and late afternoon til about 8 p.m. I lead additional sport performance sessions," she said. "Three days a week I've been going to a chiropractor who specializes in athletes and get ART/soft tissue work done to try to recover from the damages I caused playing rugby etc in the past plus improve my muscle activation since I've developed quite a few imbalances that will hinder my ability to improve my performance as I continue training."

During her midday break, she lifts every other day and does dynamic warmup/muscle activation/rehab exercises on off days.

One day per week she trains one-on-one with her supervisor, emphasizing acceleration and max velocity technique to improve speed and efficiency in her skeleton start.

She also does base running workouts – longer sprint intervals – that taper down to the specific distances used in the start of skeleton.

"This in particular is a challenge for me because I have to try to run early in the morning or late at night to avoid peak heat/humidity. I recently purchased a practice push sled off an old athlete that I am now working into my routine," she said.

"Even though that sounds like a lot, I still build in recovery days."

And her diet? Well, it's not Michael Phelps, but it is closely calculated.

"I tend to eat a lot of yogurt, hard boiled eggs, granola, grilled chicken breast and other lean meats, fresh fruits/vegetables, nuts, whey protein shakes, stuff like that," she said. "Though I eat a fair share of protein I don't cut out carbs - I just generally try to eat whole grain products."

She shoots for smaller but more frequent meals.

"Occasionally I will record my actually diet and analyze how the macro/micronutrients span out but I'd rather enjoy my meals and go based on how my body feels at this time. I used to have a more routine down, but I work a long drawn out day, and try to time out meals around my workouts and have them prepared before I head out to work. I really try to eat healthy and balanced but again the paycheck only goes so far. " She hopes to eventually be full funded.

"I would love to be able to fully dedicate my schedule to training like some athletes have had the opportunity to, but even a full-time job could not cover all my expenses at this time. That's why I'm trying to do what I can to improve quickly (train hard, invest in chiropractic care, eat relatively healthy) while still working to pay part of the way, so that my second season hopefully I can be a funded athlete," she said.

"If I can't prove myself early, I probably would have to focus more on working enough to pay general life expenses, then dedicate less time to sliding/training, which to me sounds like the track to being ranked less than I could had I fully committed myself." Bausch eventually plans Bausch eventually plans to train in Lake Placid, when she can do skeleton for weeks on end. Funding is again an issue as she would have to pay her own way.

"Even when I have the opportunity to slide daily I will try to keep up lifting/sprinting several days a week and continue varying my routine and incorporating rest/recovery so that I don't overtrain," she said.

Regardless, Bausch said the commitment and experience is making her a better person.

"I think it's worthwhile that I continue putting myself through the challenges athletes face since those experiences will likely make me a better sport performance coach (or even a chiropractor as I am still contemplating becoming)," she said.

Baseball: Indians again fall to New Holstein, defeat Cougars

By Nicole Kuehl Statesman Staff

The Indians were on the winning end of the 10-run mercy rule two times in seven days and also tallied one loss with the same rule. At press time this week, they were set to push New Holstein out of the way and lead the Eastern Wisconsin Conference.

Kewaskum 4, New Holstein 14

Monday, June 29 Kewaskum Kiwanis Park

The Indians remain winless after two games against the then current EWC front runner.

The game remained scoreless until the third inning, when the Indians scored four runs. Brandon Zolp walked to first and advanced to second on an error. Bo Seibel took first on a walk and Nick Olla singled and sent Zolp home and Seibel to second. Backhaus advanced to first on a successful bunt and Olla and Seibel advanced. A wild pitch allowed Olla to score and the other runners to advance. Harbin grounded out to first, but Olla was able to score the third run. Backhaus was able to score the final run of the inning and the game for the Indians on an error by the Huskies third baseman.

Olla was the starting pitcher for the Indians and did well until the third inning. The Huskies tallied eight of their 14 runs in that inning alone.

The first three batters hit a double, a triple and a home run to bring the game to 3-4. Boegel came in to pitch and tallied the last two outs. When the inning finally came to an end New Holstein was up 8-4.

In the bottom of the fourth, the Huskies started out with two outs, but then went on to score four more runs, ending the inning at 12-4. Schladweiler came in to earn the last out of the inning. The fifth inning saw two more runs for the Huskies, ending the game 14-4, when the mercy rule came in to play.

Olla tallied the loss for the Indians. He pitched 2 1/2 innings, had three strike-outs, four walks and five hits. Boegel tallied one walk and five hits and Schladweiler earned one strike-out, allowed one walk and three hits.

Kewaskum 12, Campbellsport 7

Tuesday, June 30

Campbellsport High School Another day, another game that had a much better outcome for the Indians as seven of their 12 runs were tallied in the first inning with Hayden Serwe pitching for the rival Cougars.

Zolp started off with a walk to first and was able to steal second. An error allowed Bo Seibel to take first and Zolp to advance to third. A single by Olla, with help from an error, sent both Zolp and Seibel home and Olla to third. Backhaus came up with another single sending Olla home. A wild pitch and hit by Steve Kudek put Backhaus at third, where he was able to score on an error, in which Harbin was also able to take first. Cody Lemke took first on a walk, allowing Harbin to advance as well. Nuernberg hit a single sending Harbin home and Lekme to third. Tony Gonring came in as a courtesy runner for Nuernberg and a hit by Zolp allowed Lemke to score and Gonring to advance to third. A single by Zolp followed by an error allowed Nuernberg to score the seventh and final run of the inning.

Three caught flys quickly ended the Cougar half of the inning.

The second inning saw three more runs for the Indians as Mike Herriges batted a single, Kudek walked and Harbin hit a double sending both runners home. Kevin Gonring came in for the Cougars to finish out the inning, but not before allowing a hit by Lemke that sent Harbin to third. Harbin was able to eventually score on an error, giving the Indians a 10-0 lead.

The third and fourth innings were scoreless for both teams, as well as the top of the fifth for the Indians.

The Cougars were finally able to score runs in the bottom of the fifth. Chris Weiland was walked by Nuernberg. Matt Serwe earned a single and sent Weiland to third. Olla came in for the Indians and allowed a hit by Kevin Gonring, sending him to first. With the bases loaded, Olla walked Sam Braatz sending Weiland home to score the first Cougar run. A strike out followed and Neil Scannell took first. With bases loaded, Shane Jacklin took first and sent K. Gonring home and Braatz to third. A wild pitch allowed Braatz to score the third run for the Cougars, bringing the game to 10-3.

The Indians scored their final two runs of the game in the top of the sixth. Herriges started with a single and Steve Chapman followed with another. Harbin hit a sacrifice fly sending Herriges to third and Chapman to second. Errors allowed both runners to score, ending the half 12-3.

Nate Baumhardt gave the Cougars a double. Weiland followed with a walk. M. Serwe earned the first out with a caught fly to center. K. Gonring took the plate and hit a single, sending Baumhardt and Weiland home. Gonring made his way around the bags bringing the score to 12-6. The Cougars scored their last run as Baumhardt made his way around with the help of a stolen base, an error and a hit by M. Serwe.

Nuernberg tallied the win for the Indians with five strikeouts, five walks and three hits. Olla tallied two strike-outs, three walks and four hits. Boegel had two strike-outs, one walk and allowed one hit.

Kewaskum 1, West Bend East 5

Friday, July 3 Kewaskum Kiwanis Park

With Nuernberg on the mound, the Indians started off well with three-up-three down in the first inning, however they remained scoreless until the bottom of the third, while East was able to score two runs in the second. Boegel came in to pitch in the third, and West Bend was able to score a third run, bringing the game to 3-0.

The Indians were only able to answer one run when Olla was walked and eventually made it home on a fly by Bo Seibel.

Cody Seibel came in the fifth to relieve Boegel. The Suns went on to score two more runs in the seventh when EJ Sexton hit a home run, scoring two.

Nuernberg took the loss with two strikeouts, two walks and allowing one hit. Boegel tallied one strike out, one walk and one hit. Cody Seibel had two strike outs, two walks and one hit.
